S. Manning and Judge A. Burwell were authorized to act on the part of the directors. —— Clearance papers will not be issued to any vessel unless affidavit is made that the neutrality and navigation laws will not be violated in letter or spirit. —— Fitzsimmons knocked Corbett out in fourteen rounds; the fight was a clean and speedy one and demonstrated the fact that Corbett is the cleverest boxer of his weight in the world and that Fitzsimmons can hit him. ——New York markets: Money on call quiet at 1½@1¾ per cent., last loan at 1¾ per cent., closing offered at 1¾ per cent.; cotton steady—middling 7¼c; Southern flour was quoted unchanged; —common to fair extra $3 20 @3 50, good to choice $3 60@4 00; wheat—spot market dull and firmer with options, No. 2 red free on board 84c; corn—spot dull, scarce, higher; No. 2 29½c at elevator and 30c afloat; rosin unchanged—strained common to good $1 65; spirits turpentine unchanged at 29@29½c.

A Maryland drummer has been left $30,000 by a rich old fellow in Minneapolis, which town the drummer visited several years ago, met the old man's daughter, and drummer-like paid her some attention. Since then he had almost forgotten the old gentleman and was surprised that in the will he had been remembered to the tune of $30,000. He doesn't understand it. Perhaps this was the old gentleman's way of showing his gratitude that the drummer didn't take his daughter away from him.

Ex-President Harrison is being lauded for refusing to write a letter to President McKinley in behalf of his son Russell, who wants the collectorship for his district, a $4,000 job, or to sign his petition. But in declining Mr. Harrison took occasion to remark that he would be very much pleased if Mr. McKinley would appoint Russell, which, as we see it, was endorsement enough.

A St. Louis man accused of murder, who was acquitted of the charge on the ground of insanity, straightened up after the verdict, threw off the insane disguise and in a neat little speech thanked the jury for the service they had rendered him. Then the jury looked at each other to see if they could tell which of them was the biggest fool.

According to the latest census Hawaii has a population of 109,020, of whom 31,019 are native Hawaiians, 24,507 Japanese, 21,616 Chinese, 15,181 Portugese, 3,086 Americans, 2,250 English and 1,432 Germans, with 8,485 mixed bloods, and several other nationalities. A pretty bad mix.

I. H. Thomas, of Cleveland, O., bears such a striking resemblance to Mark Hanna, of Cleveland, O, that when Mark meets him he isn't quite sure whether he ought to shake his own hand or the other fellow's. Mr. Thomas not only resembles Mr. Hanna in person but their manners are very much alike.

THE CORBETT-FITZSIMMONS FIGHT

Eagerness Displayed to Hear the News from Carson — Great Enthusiasm Among Fitzsimmons Adherents Over His Victory.

At 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon the "sports" commenced to gather to await the returns from the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight. Shortly before 1 o'clock bulletins, stating the usual preliminaries, began to arrive and were devoured on sight. Before 3 o'clock the sidewalk in front of J. R. Smith's cigar store, where the STAR displayed bulletins of the fight, was packed with people, and a room at the STAR office, which had been prepared for this especial purpose and where bulletins of the fight by rounds were also received, was crowded, many veteran sports being present.

Corbett's admirers were numbered by scores, while "Lanky Bob" only had a few to champion his cause, yet they were "game" and stuck to their favorite faithfully. At 3 o'clock bulletins, describing the fight by rounds, began to arrive, and the excitement began to rise. Up to the sixth round it was looking pretty squally for the Cornishman, and his advocates began to get shaky, while the Corbett men became more pronounced. The Australian's stock was way below par, but when the tenth round was reached his stock arose rapidly, and his admirers once more commenced to smile and look confident. While the eleventh round was being sent over the wires the operator sending the message cut it short to announce that Robert Fitzsimmons had just defeated Jas. J. Corbett in fourteen rounds. The Fitzsimmons men then went perfectly wild, and during the excitement many hats were smashed, but what cared these "sports" for hats and the like, for their man had won.

Judging from the telegraphic accounts of the fight Fitzsimmons certainly showed his ability as a pugilist, and also his gameness and power of endurance. Many thought that Fitzsimmons would act jentirely on the defensive, while others expressed the opinion that he would taunt Corbett into madness. Both opinions were highly probable, but "Lanky Bob" knew his own ability, and at once started viciously fighting an opponent several pounds his superior in weight. Many predicted that it would be a short fight, for if it happened to be a battle of any length, to use a trite expression, Fitzsimmons would be "in it." In this respect, too, the Cornishman fooled 'em, and displayed better power of endurance than the man who fought sixty-one rounds with Peter Jackson.

The fight yesterday was the hardest battle that has been fought for many years, with Corbett the winner, so far as the scientific feature of the event went.

As in all battles for the championship, new fighters constantly arise to challenge the winner, and yesterday Tom Sharkey, Joe Goddard, and old John L., once the greatest fighter of them all, put in a bid to fight the champion.

Fitzsimmons defeated Jack Dempsey in thirteen rounds, thereby gaining the middle-weight championship of America, and it only took one round more to win the heavy-weight championship of the world.

A Handsome Brick Store to Be Erected.

Mr. I. Shrier will erect a handsome brick store in the place of the one on Front street, between Mulberry and Chesnut, destroyed by fire on the night of February 19th.

The plans have been prepared by Mr. Jas. F. Post, whose name is guarantee enough that the building will be one of great architectural beauty.

The store will be two stories in height, with a basement, and will be 82 feet long by 88 feet wide. It is to be equipped with an iron front, plate glass windows and stone trimmings.

Brick buildings will probably be erected before long on the remainder of the area devastated by the fire. One will certainly be put up on the Maunder property, but the plans have not yet been made. The Marks property will be sold at auction at an early date, and it is hoped that the purchaser will erect upon it a building to compare favorably with that of Mr. Shrier's.

Death of Mr. Kelly Sessoms, of Stedman.

The STAR is sincerely grieved to hear of the death of Mr. Kelly Sessoms, of Stedman, which took place yesterday morning at 8.40 o'clock.

Mr. Sessoms was one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Cumberland county, and leaves many friends in this city and elsewhere who will be pained to learn that he is no more. He is survived by a large family of sons and daughters, among whom are Mr. J. D. Sessoms, of Stedman; Messrs. Theodore and Frank Sessoms, of Ivanhoe; Mr. Alex. Sessoms, of Hope Mills, and Mrs. W. M. Corbett, of Ivanhoe.

The deceased had reached a ripe old age, being between seventy and seventy-five years old.

See notice in advertising columns of a request from the executive committee that all qualified voters participate in the primaries called to be held Friday night, March 19th. ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

The Occasion Appropriately Observed By the Hibernian Society—Report of the President—Election of Officers.

Yesterday being St. Patrick's Day, it was celebrated in this city by the Hibernian Society in an appropriate manner. At 9 o'clock a. m. the Society assembled at its hall, on Third street, near Princess, and marched to St. Thomas' Pro-Cathedral.

At the church Rev. Father Griffin celebrated high mass, and, after divine service, Rev. Father Dannen delivered an eloquent speech on "The faithful labors of St. Patrick in the conversion of the Irish race to Christianity."

When the society returned to their hall the regular annual meeting and election of officers were held. The secretary, Mr. William Flanagan, read an able address, which had been prepared by Mr. John Dyer, who was unable to be in attendance on account of sickness. Mr. Dyer's address was a masterly effort, and one of pure eloquence.

The society was then addressed by the Rev. Father Griffin, of this city, and the Rev. Father Quinn, of Newbern, and the president, Mr. Martin O'Brien, read his annual report, which showed that the society was in a very flourishing condition in every respect. His report showed the receipts for the past year to have been $1,003.04 and the disbursements $767.81, which consists of sick benefits, sick nurse hire and funeral fees.

The society has lost by death in the last twelve months three members and gained six new members.

The election of officers resulted in the unanimous re-election of the present incumbents, as follows:

President—M. O'Brien.
Vice President—Thos. Quinlivan.
Secretary—Wm. Flanagan.
Assistant Secretary—Frank P. Donlan.
Treasurer—Wm. Sheehan, Jr.
Standaad Bearer—Robt. Green.

Epworth League.

A very enjoyable meeting of the Epworth League of Grace M. E. church was held on Tuesday night which was largely attended. It was opened with religious services. After hearing reports from committees and attending to the routine business incident to a regular monthly meeting, a very attractive programme for those present was presented by the Literary Department, consisting of a well rendered vocal duet by Misses Nora Scott and May Galloway; an amusing recitation by little Miss Alice Craft; a fine tenor solo by Mr. Frank Westbrook, followed by two readings by Dr. W. C. Galloway, viz: "Schemes of Life often Illusory," and "Sam Weller's Valentine," which was much enjoyed. "God be With You" was sung as a doxology, when the exercises of the evening closed and its attendants returned to their homes, feeling that they had spent a very pleasant evening.

Fell Fifteen Feet and Landed on His Head.

Yesterday morning while the tug Blanche, Capt. Craig, was loading at Market dock preparatory for her trip to Southport, Ed Slain, a colored deck hand, fell from off a rail in the engine room, a distance of about fifteen feet, landing on his head. He was picked up, although conscious, and carried to the cabin of the boat. Drs. Shepard and Russell were immediately sent for, and in a few minutes were in attendance. Slain appeared to be all right, except for a severe gash on his head, and went with the Blanche on her journey to Southport.

Dog and Pony Show.

Prof. Gentry's Dog and Pony Show will exhibit in this city to-morrow and Saturday. The canvas will be pitched in a lot on Front street near Church, and two performances will be given daily. Prof. Gentry's trained ponies and dogs are conceded by all to be among the best, and they have to be seen to be appreciated. To-morrow afternoon a parade will take place through the principal streets of the city, and that as well as the show should not be missed. The admission will be, adults 20 cents and children 10 cents.

Nahunta Tribe, I. O. R. M., Instituted at Rocky Mount.

Deputy Great Iacohonee J. J. Hopkins, with twelve braves from Eyota Tribe No. 5 and Cherokee Tribe No. 9, Improved Order of Red Men, left yesterday morning for Rocky Mount, where they instituted Nahunta Tribe No. 15 last night. The team was composed of Messrs. G. W. Carter, J. R. Davis, M. Mashburn, Sol. Sternberger, J. O. Willoughby, J. C. Walton, J. G. Sneeden, Tony Fantapula, C. E. Oller, Frank La Fella and C. M. Wacksner.

At the Opera House.

The Maryland Projectoscope Company closed their third evening's engagement at the Opera House last night before a large and well pleased audience, who were most flattering in their applause. The matinee yesterday proving such a success, the company will give one every afternoon this week, commencing at 3.30 o'clock.

Seats for to-night's performance on sale at Gerken's.

A Real Novelty.

A novelty of any description is thoroughly appreciated, but more especially so in the amusement line, of which there are few. The one that enjoys the distinction of possessing really more novelty and interesting features is Prof. Gentry's famous dog and pony show, which exhibits in this city under a tent on Front street, near Church, Friday and Saturday nights, March 19 and 20. Matinee Saturday 2.30 p. m.

The entire performance is given by one hundred superb dogs and ponies, all of whom are famous for their beauty and intelligence. They have been educated to a wonderful degree of intelligence by Prof. Gentry, who is known everywhere as a most successful trainer of animals. The prices of admission are decidedly reasonable, being children 10 cents and adults 20 cents.

NEWS FROM RALEIGH.

NO STRAIGHT REPUBLICAN TICKET IN MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

Gov. Russell Arrives—Base Ball Games Next Month—Chamber of Commerce and the Army Post Question—Penitentiary Directors Elect Officers—The A. & N. C. Railway.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., March 17.

Governor Russell arrived from Wilmington this morning.

The Baltimore base ball team meets the Wake Forest nine here on the 6th of April. On the 3rd of April the University and the Wake Forest teams play a championship game here.

Jim Young, the negro leader and Republican boss in Raleigh and Wake county, tells me that the Republicans will not put up a straight ticket in the coming municipal election. He says the Republicans will join in with the Independent League which claims to have a membership of 250 votes, mostly Democrats. The league is something new and just where the 250 voters come from no one seems to know.

At the Chamber of Commerce meeting last evening the question of uniting in an effort to establish an "army post" at Raleigh was acted upon favorably. The truth of the matter is that nothing will be done until the district gets an energetic and intelligent representative in Congress who is living in the present age. Uncle Strowd, our present representative, is an honest, good meaning old man, but he has become fossilized. I asked him several months ago why he did not push the military post bill for Raleigh. "Well," said he, "it ain't worth the time. North Carolina can't get anything, and its no use to ask for it." Old man Strowd honestly thinks that he cannot accomplish anything, and he'll never make the effort.

Interest in the prize fight in Raleigh was general. Bulletins were read by large crowds.

[Special Star Telegram]

The penitentiary directors elected Claude Dockery chairman. Committees were appointed to investigate the books and inspect farms. Dr. J. R. Rogers was elected physician, Reinhardt superintendent Anson farm, and White Steward of Caledonia farm. Other offices will be filled at an adjourned meeting thirty days hence. Robert Hancock is here to get the Governor to appoint new directors of the A. & N. C. Railway immediately. Governor Russell is inclined to allow the present management to continue until September.

RALEIGH & GASTON RAILROAD.

[Raleigh News and Observer, March 14th.]

The Raleigh & Gaston Railroad Company has filed a mortgage in the office of the Register of Deeds of this county for $1,500,000.

This mortgage is to secure 5 per cent. bonds to the amount of $1,500,000 which the company has succeeded in placing.

One million of this will be used in taking up the 8 per cent. bonds to that amount now outstanding and due January 1, 1898.

The remaining half million will of course be a fund belonging to the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad Company. It is said that it will be used in backing De-Witt Smith and his associates in the construction of the road from Ridgeway to Petersburg. This road will shorten the distance from Raleigh to Petersburg about forty miles. In other words, it will move this city forty miles further north or one hour's travel nearer Richmond, Washington, Philadelphia and New York.

The wisdom of the company in taking up these outstanding 8 per cent. bonds with new 5 per cent. ones is seen when it is remembered that the company by this decreased rate of interest gets $1,500,000 for $5,000 a year less than it has heretofore been paying for $1,000,000.

For the $1,000 000 at 8 per cent. the company paid $80,000 a year; for the $1,500,000 at 5 per cent. it will pay only $75,000 a year.

This means much for the Seaboard system and has already created a flurry in Raleigh & Gaston stock. Those who have are loath to part with it at any price until they can realize the full meaning of this deal.

This mortgage comprises seventeen written pages and is probably the largest instrument of the kind, both as to its length and the amount involved, ever recorded in Wake county.

The Morning Star.

By WILLIAM H. BERNARD.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 18

PREDICTIONS VERIFIED.

When the Wilson tariff bill, which the protectionists now want repealed, was under discussion its advocates predicted that if the protective duties were reduced or abolished, and our manufacturers had free raw materials they would be thrown upon their own resources, learn to rely upon themselves, cease to depend so much upon the "home market," and make more effort to extend their trade into foreign countries How fully these predictions have been verified is shown by the following statement of the exports of manufacturers in the decades from 1860 to 1890 and the years from 1891 to 1896, with the per cent. of the total exports. The statement is furnished by the Washington correspondent of the New York Journal for that paper :

Year.	Exports of manufactures	Per cent. of total exports.
1860.....	$ 40.345.893	12 76
1870.....	68 277.764	15 00
1880.....	102 856 015	13 48
1885.....	147,187.527	20 25
1890.....	151.102 876	17 87
1891.....	168 927.815	19 37
1892.....	158 510 987	15 61
1893.....	158 023 118	19.02
1894.....	183 728 808	21.14
1895.....	188 595.748	23.14
1896.....	228,489,893	26.47

These figures show a verification of the predictions of the tariff reducers that cannot be questioned. The continued increase in the volume of our manufactured exports from 1860 to the present time shows the ability of our manufacturers to hold their own against foreign competition, while the increase for the past few years foreshadows what they might do if it was an open race between them and their European competitors, and both stood upon the same plane as regards tariff systems, transportation, etc. As high tariff duties interfere to a greater or less extent with the sale of our farm products in foreign countries, because they operate against the free exchange of products of this country, so they operate more or less against the sale of our manufactures in those countries for the same reason. If they buy our farm products it is because they must have them and cannot get them in other countries, and if they buy our manufactures it is because the American manufacturer can furnish as good or a better article for less money than the manufacturers of the country in which they are sold can.

If one of our manufacturers of agricultural implements, for instance, could ship a cargo to any foreign country and could take in exchange a cargo of some of the manufactures of that country and make a profit on it by bringing it to this country, isn't it reasonable to suppose that he could dispose of more of his manufactures than if he insisted on cash for them? But the tariff duties which the foreign manufacturers have to pay either prevent him from making any profit on them or leave the profit so small as not to make the exchange an object. Thus the duties which are ostensibly levied to protect him in the home market operate to keep him out of the foreign market which he should be anxious to reach.

It is the sheerest absurdity to assert that our manufacturers need high duties to protect them from foreign competition in the home market when it has been demonstrated that with all the disadvantages under which they have labored they steadily expanded their trade into the very countries from which it is alleged they need protection.

The man who is really anxious to foster American manufactories and make them permanently prosperous without doing so by levying heavy tribute upon and burdening American consumers should desire to see markets opened in other countries and give the manufacturer the benefit of them. It is folly to expect that American manufacturers can permanently prosper if they be confixed to the home market or are encouraged to depend upon it. If they were to prosper it would be a dishonest prosperity, because it would come from a species of taxation that is nothing more nor less than legalized plunder. The legislation of this kind which is intended to foster manufactories would in the long run prove ruinous, because the prospects of gain in a market practically without foreign competition would stimulate manufactures to such an extent that the business would in all probability be overdone and bring disaster to many, whereas if the markets of the world in addition to the home market were opened, the field would be wide enough to leave little danger of overdoing or of one manufacture getting in the way of another.

The home market is very good as far as it goes; it is the best market in the world, because the American people are liberal buyers and liberal payers, but it is not big enough to consume the products of our various industries and keep them constantly and profitably employed. When all are at work on full time it does not take them long to produce more than is consumed and they soon find themselves with a surplus just as our farmers do in an ordinarily good crop year. Foreign markets are the outlet for this surplus, or should be, as they are of the farmer's products. Tariffs may levy tribute upon the American people for the benefit of the protected industries, and put money in the pockets of the protected, but they can never be permanently prosperous and self-dependent until they branch out and build up a business in other countries, as they have been doing, for the past few years especially, and as they would continue to do if this protection cry were hushed and they were not encouraged to look to the home market for their profits.

SELF GOVERNMENT.

A correspondent asks our opinion as to the power of the Legislature (assuming that it has the constitutional right to appoint Aldermen for a city) to delegate that power to the Governor.

We do not believe that the Legislature has a constitutional right to appoint Aldermen of a city, and therefore we do not believe it has the right to delegate that power to the Governor, or any one else, and it has as much right to delegate it to any one else as it has to the Governor. But if it had the right to exercise this power itself, it has not the right to delegate it to another. It might as well delegate to the Governor the power to appoint magistrates, sheriffs, county commissioners, and even members of the Legislature, for in one case the right of popular government, the right of the people to choose the agents who are to administer their city, county and State governments—one of the fundamental constitutional rights—is as much invaded as in the others. The whole spirit of our form of government is against the one man power, and that is all that this delegating to the Governor the right to appoint representative officers means. Such appointees would not be representatives of the people of the city but of the man who appointed them, and if a conflict should come between the people and this man in any matter of municipal government they would, unless they were made of very superior stuff, stand with him against the people.

Reference to section 2 and 3 of article 1 (declaration of rights) in our State Constitution will show what emphasis was laid upon the right of the people to govern themselves, and what is therein said applies as much to the people of a city or a county as it does to the people of the State at large, for the State is simply a larger community than the city or the county. There is no intimation here of a one man power contingency or of the Legislature to constitute itself an arbitrary and supreme power.

Some of the best authorities on constitutional law and on constitutional limitations, and some of the decisions of our courts hold that the right of the people to elect their municipal legislators is as inherent as to elect the members of their State Legislature, and that they cannot under our form of government be deprived of this right.

If this question go to the courts we predict that the right of the people to govern themselves will be sustained and the one-man power turned down.

MINOR MENTION.

Ex-Congressman Straus, of New York, a Democrat, who supported McKinley, is about sorry he did it. He is a member of the firm of Macy & Co., of New York, and in the following to the New York Herald talks as a business man on the effect of the proposed increase of duties:

"The woollen schedule will advance every article that the poor man needs from 25 to 38 per cent., and, with the extra rate on wool, the temptation to use shoddy and other substitutes will deprive the only people who need it most of woollen clothing in the honest sense of the word.

"There is no disguising the fact at this time that the tax which they put on the needs of every one is not for revenue to be derived from that tax. But for every $10 worth of protection to the domestic producer only one dollar will go into the Treasury. In other words, for every dollar's worth of woollen goods which will be imported there will be probably $10 worth manufactured here and there will be paid into the pockets of the producers of this $10 worth just sufficient of the tax as will keep the price below what the imported article will cost.

"If I am correctly informed the nominal duty on raw wool will be fixed at about the same rate as existed under the McKinley bill with some changes in classification, which it appears to me is within the bounds of reason to say that there will be an increase in the cost of all woollens of thirty three per cent.

"The argument that I have applied to woollen goods will apply to every other in which there is an increase in the tariff, and this time the Republicans can't make any denial of it. The evident purpose of the bill is protection, with such incidental revenue as is inseparable from it. The sound money Democrats who voted for Mr. McKinley, of whom I am one, are certainly very much taken aback. If the newspaper reports of McKinley rates have been substantially agreed upon and are going to dominate the tariff bill, the Republicans themselves—and I have talked to hundreds of them—to say nothing of the reports gathered from newspapers—admit that McKinleyism is a mistake, goes too far and never can be repeated. In voting for Mr. McKinley we thought we were denouncing free silver. We were prepared to have a change in the tariff along moderate line, but the cry of those who looked after their own individual interests seems to have overwhelmed the Ways and Means Committee, and they have lost sight entirely of the millions of consumers throughout the country and of the hundreds of thousands of Democrats, without whom Mr. McKinley could not have been elected."

We infer from the conclusion of this that Mr. Straus and many other Democrats who helped elect McKinley are about sorry they did it. But they were gudgeons to expect anything else.

The Washington correspondent of the Raleigh News and Observer says Senator Pritchard is having a fearful time and is almost crazy with the racket the pie hunters are putting him through, and there are lots of them. The Hon. Jim Boyd isn't making very conspicuous progress, unless it be backwards, for from an aspirant to a Cabinet position or something "equally as good" he has come down now to something which isn't equally as good by a jug full. He has made a bid for three or four positions only to learn that these have been already pre-empted, and what's worse for Jim he seems to have struck a snag in Secretary Sherman, who has a remarkably tenacious memory when he wants to remember and who takes more solid comfort in knocking the stilts from under a fellow he wants to down than any other 70-odd year old chap in America. Here is the way Jim ran against the snag, as told by the News and Observer's correspondent :

"Jim Boyd is unfortunate. A story is going the rounds to the effect that in 1888, Boyd promised Sherman to support him for the Presidency, but went to Raleigh and caused the State Republican convention to declare against Sherman and defeat Canaday and the whole Sherman contingent, after which Boyd came here and boasted that he had "driven old Sherman's tail in." Now Sherman is in a position to return the compliment and will, it is said, take pleasure in doing so."

ODD SIGNS IN LONDON.

Things Which Are Jokes Without Intending to Be Such.

The American's first visit to London brings to his notice, if he be at all observant, many peculiar signs. Here are a few seen by a reporter last summer:

Englishmen are noted all the world over as prolific letter writers. In fact, little personal attention is paid to business when it is possible to write a letter and say what one ordinarily should say verbally. Attached to the heavy doors of four-fifths of the most successful business houses in the English capital is a highly polished brass plate, on which is inscribed, "Do Not Ring the Bell Unless an Answer Is Required."

Directly under this plate is an opening for dropping letters "that do not require an oral answer."

On the Strand, within a stone's throw of the Bank of England, is a well known tradesman who has a "richly" huge blue sign in his window which tells the busy throng outside that "Yankie Cyder Is Sold Here."

It may be considered a joke—this sign—as a party of Americans who inquired earnestly believed, but the tradesman took the matter quite seriously when the subject of the sign was broached and then remarked:

"Hi am er blooming blighter hif another chap didn't soy the same thing t'day. 'E told me 'ow to spell Yankee, but 'ang me hif hit 'asn't escaped me memory. Hit will 'ave to do now, though."

A "gentleman's hairdresser" close to Charing Cross exposes a sign which says, "Hair Neatly Trimmed While You Wait."

And that sign, too, was not intended as a joke. London's signs are indeed peculiar, if not strikingly odd.—New York Mail and Express.

The London Sparrow.

In his old haunts among the bricks and mortar the London sparrow is far more particular in the choice of a site for his nest than might be thought. Conscious of the ever present danger from cats, he seeks a hollow in a perpendicular wall face. It does not matter whether this is among the limbs of a statue in a niche or the pediment of a Palladian window, but any proximity to the line of roof, cat haunted and therefore dangerous, is avoided. Unlike the rats, the London sparrows do not desert a falling house. Those which are advertised for sale and demolition and are consequently covered with large frames for bill posting are in great request with them. The spaces between the bill frames and the walls to which they are bolted are safe and commodious nesting grounds, and the iron spikes, pegs of wood and ledges of the frames make capital perches.

Some houses adjoining those demolished to make a way to the Hotel Cecil and decorated with advertisements are blessed with a few sparrow families living between the advertisement boards and the wall and getting the greater part of their living from the oats dropped from the nosebags of the horses on the cab stand near the hotel. Others have nested behind the carving over the windows in Attenborough's shop. But in the case of rows of houses they seem to avoid the gutters, which are their pet nesting places on detached residences. The probable reason is that in terraces cats traverse the whole of the roof and gutter line and can claw out any broods within reach of their nightly prowl.—London Spectator.

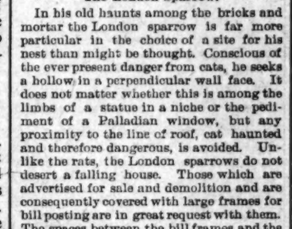
A Railroad Official's Experience.



MR. EDWARD EDMONDS, long connected with railroad construction in Nebraska, writes: "My heart troubled and pained me for 19 years. Shortness of breath was the constant and most common symptom. Intense, excruciating pain, generally followed any severe exertion. Faintness, hunger without any appetite; fluttering that made me clutch my breast, and palpitation that often staggered me as if I would fall, were frequent attacks. Again, everything would turn black if I arose from a stooping posture quickly. Sleepless nights with their prostrating unrest were numerous and I could get no rest day or night. I consulted leading physicians and tried advertised remedies. They gave me no relief. One of Dr. Miles' circulars described my case so exactly that I took Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and I am now a well man. I hope every one troubled with heart disease will try Dr. Miles' remedies. If they will write me personally, I will gladly give them full details of my experience." EDW. EDMONDS.

WILL SHAKESPEARE.

HOW HIS NAME FIGURED IN A QUARREL IN STRATFORD.

The Lord High Admiral's Players, Being Thirsty, Were Lacking In Respect For the Town's Dignitaries, and the Burgesses Refused Them a License.

"Master Skylark," by John Bennett, in St. Nicholas, is a story of the time of Shakespeare, and the poet figures in it. This is a scene from the first installment:

"Oh, Nick, such goings on!" called Robin Getley, whose father was a burgess, as Nick Attwood came slowly up the street, saying his sentences for the day over and over to himself in hopeless desperation, having had no time to learn them at home. "Stratford council has had a quarrel, and there's to be no stage play, after all."

"What?" cried Nick in amazement. "No stage play? And why not?"

"Why," said Robin, "it was just this way—my father told me of it: Sir Thomas Lucy, high sheriff of Worcester, you know, rode in from Charlcote yesternoon, and with him Sir Edward Greville of Milcote. So the burgesses made a feast for them at the Swan inn. Sir Thomas fetched a fine, fat buck, and the town stood good for ninepence wine and twopence bread, and broached a keg of sturgeon. And when they were all met together there, eating and drinking and making merry—what? Why, in came my lord admiral's players from London town, ruffling it like high dukes and not caring two pops for Sir Thomas or Sir Edward or for Stratford burgesses all in a heap, but sat them down at the table straightway and called for ale, as if they owned the place. And not being served as soon as they desired, they laid hands upon Sir Thomas' server as he came in from the buttery with his tray full and took both meat and drink."

"What?" cried Nick.

"As sure as shooting, they did," said Robin, "and when Sir Thomas' gentry yeomen would have seen to it—what? Why, my lord admiral's master player clapped his hand to his ponlard hilt and dared them come and take it if they could."

"To Sir Thomas Lucy's men!" exclaimed Nick aghast.

"Aye, to their teeth. Sir Edward sprang up then and said it was a shame for players to behave so outrageously in Will Shakespeare's own home town. And at that Sir Thomas, who, ye know, has always disliked Will, flared up like a bull at a red rag and swore that all stage players be runagate rogues anyway, and Will Shakespeare neither more nor less than a deer stealing scape gallows."

"Surely he did na say that in Stratford council!" protested Nick.

"Aye, but he did—that very thing," said Robin, "and when that was out, the master player sprang upon the table, overturning half the ale, and cried out that Will Shakespeare was his very own true friend, and the sweetest fellow in all England, and that whosoever gainsaid it was a hemp cracking rascal, and that he would prove it upon his back with a quarter staff whenever and wherever he chose, be he Sir Thomas Lucy, St. George and the Dragon, Guy of Warwick and the great dun cow, all rolled up in one!"

"Robin Getley, is this the very truth or art thou cozening me?"

"Upon my word, it is the truth," said Robin. "And that's not all. Sir Edward cried out fie upon the player for a saucy varlet; but the ellow only laughed, and bowed quite low, and said that he took no offense from Sir Edward for saying that, since it could not honestly be denied, but that Sir Thomas did not know the truth from a truckleb ed in broad daylight and was but the remnant of a gentleman to boot."

"The bold faced rogue!"

"Aye, that he is," nodded Robin, "and for his boldness Sir Thomas straightway demanded that the high bailiff refuse the company license to play in Stratford."

"Refuse the lord high admiral's players?"

"Marry, no one else. And then Master John Shakespeare, wroth at what Sir Thomas had said to his son Will, vowed that he would send a letter down to London town and lay the whole coil before the lord high admiral himself. For ever since that he was high bailiff the best companies of England had always been bidden to play in Stratford, and it would be an ill thing now to refuse the lord admiral's company after granting licenses to both my Lord Pembroke's and the high chamberlain's."

"And so it would," spoke up Walter Roche, "for there are our own townsmen, Richard and Cuthbert Burbage, who are cousins of mine, and John Hemynge and Thomas Greene, besides Will Shakespeare and his brother Edmund, all playing in the lord chamberlain's company in London before the queen. It would be a black score against them all with the lord admiral. I doubt not he would pay them out."

"That he would," said Robin, "and so said my father and Alderman Henry Walker, who, ye know, is Will Shakespeare's own friend. And some of the burgesses who cared not a rap for that were afeared of offending the lord admiral. But Sir Thomas vowed that my Lord Howard was at Cadiz with Walter Raleigh and the young Earl of Sussex, and would by no means hear of it. So Master Bailiff Stubbes, who, 'tis said, doth owe Sir Thomas £40 and is therefore under his thumb, forthwith refused the company license to play in Stratford guild hall, innyard or common. And at that the master player threw his glove into Master Stubbes' face and called Sir Thomas a stupid old bell wether and Stratford burgesses silly sheep for following wherever he chose to jump.

"When the master player threw his glove into Master Stubbes' face, the chief constable seized him for contempt of Stratford council and held him for trial. At that some cried 'Shame!' and some 'Hurrah!' but the rest of the players fled out of town in the night, lest their baggage be taken by the law and they be fined."

The Cocoanut Crab.

The cocoanut crab is one of the oddest specimens of the whole crab family. He lives in the south islands and makes a diet of cocoanuts. This species has a pair of front legs terminated with a strong pair of pinchers, and it is with these that he husks the nuts and breaks through the weakest portion of the shell. The crab begins by tearing the husk, fiber by fiber, and always at the end where the eyeholes of the nut are situated, that being the weakest place in the shell. When the husk has been removed, the crab commences hammering the shell with his heavy claw and soon makes an opening, through which he extracts the meat of the nut. Mr. Darwin, writing of this crab, says, "I think this is as curious a case of instinct as I ever heard of, especially in structures so remote from each other in the scheme of nature as a cocoanut and a crab."—St. Louis Republic.

To Be Noted by Engaged People.

To the president of the Camera club belongs the credit of having put forward quite the most interesting suggestion yet offered on the subject of the general utilization of the Roentgen rays. His proposal is the eminently practical one that all engaged couples should exchange photographs taken by the new process in order that they may be mutually satisfied that they are undertaking a sound matrimonial investment from the personal point of view. Furnished with cartes de visite of each other's skeleton, they will be assured against any danger of making harrowing discoveries of physical deficiencies or imitation limbs when it is too late to withdraw from the bargain. But there would, of course, have to be a proviso that any information so obtained should be held sacred in the event of the engagement being broken off.—London World.

A Family Blessing.

"My husband was a dyspeptic when I married him."

"That must have been a great affliction to you?"

"On the contrary, it was a blessing. He never alludes to his mother's cooking."—Detroit Free Press.

LOCKIN BACKWARDS.

Settin here so kind a lonely,
Gazin out across the way,
Nothin there to look at only
What I see most every day,
Houses jest like one another,
Towerin up four stories high,
Nice enough, but then I'd rather
See a good sized bit o' sky,
Like the sky so blue an soft an
Fleecylike. How I'd enjoy
Seein it ez I did often
When I was a growin boy—

When I was a happy youngster,
Laughin'like at earthly ills,
Livin on th' farm among th'
Dear New England rugged hills!
Wish 't when I wake up some mornin
I ked find myself again
In the house what I was born in,
Sleepin side o' brother Ben.
How the ole straw bed ud rest me,
Sleepin through 'ithout a break!
I dunno though but I'd jest be Satisfied to lay awake.

Wonder ef there's many changes
In the place 'et I ked see?
Guess the thing 'twould seem most strange is
Me, the boy that ust to be.
There was our ole scup that hung there
On the ellum tree, where J
Lots o' times have set an swung there,
Waitin for the cat to die.
Went to school then, 'cept in hayin.
Books I some way didn't love,
'Member mother kep' a sayin,
"Hurry; it's a quarter of!"

Ust ter call myself fil treated
When I had to fetch the cow,
Guess I know how more'n sweet ud
Be a ramble like that now.
I kin almos' smell th' clover
Freshenin th' mornin breeze,
Not much like th' smells all over
City streets like soch ez these.
Suthin's set my eyes a-winkin,
Does occasionally when
I set down an git a-thinkin
'Et I was a boy again.

The Man and the Snake.

The reputed fascination of the serpent's eye is the motive of a story in Mr. Ambrose Bierce's volume of tales entitled "In the Midst of Life." Mr. Brayton was the guest of a friend, an eminent zoologist, whose specialty, of which he had a fine collection, was snakes. Stretched upon a sofa in his own room, Mr. Brayton glanced from the book he was carelessly scanning while awaiting the summons to dinner and saw in the shadow under his bed two small points of light about an inch apart. He gave them no special thought and resumed his reading.

In a few minutes he gave an involuntary start and stared into the obscurity under the bed. His gaze disclosed the coils of a large serpent. The points of light were its eyes, but they were no longer merely luminous points; they looked into his own with a malign significance. Brayton was a brave man, but this seemed an occasion when discretion was the better part of valor. He would beat a retreat, and backward, so as not to disturb the reptile, but instead of the movement his will had shaped his right foot was placed in advance of his left.

The snake did not move, but its eyes seemed to become larger and more luminous. There were strange noises in Brayton's ears as, with reluctant steps, he could not refrain from drawing nearer the bed. Suddenly something struck him a hard blow upon the face. He had fallen to the floor.

The zoologist, startled by a terrific scream from above, rushed to his friend's room. There lay Brayton, senseless. As he bent over him he glanced under the bed.

"How did this thing get here?" he exclaimed, and pulling out the snake he flung it to the center of the room, where it lay without motion.

It was a stuffed snake. Its eyes were two shoe buttons.

Old Abe, the War Eagle.

Old Abe, the famous Wisconsin war eagle, was captured in the spring of 1861 on Flambeau river, near the line between Ashland and Prince counties, by a Chippewa Indian chief named Sky. The bird was then about the size of a common chicken hawk. The Indian traded the eagle to Daniel McCann of Eagle Point, Wis., for a bushel of corn, and McCann sold it to a Mr. Mills of Eau Claire for $5. Mills presented the bird to Captain J. E. Perkins, who was then organizing the Eighth Wisconsin regiment. The bird then began the most remarkable career that has ever been known to a member of the feathered tribe. At Madison, before the regiment left for the south, the eagle was given the name of Old Abe, in honor of President Lincoln. A perch was then made for the bird, which was carried at the side of the colors of Company C of the Eighth Wisconsin. At the siege of Corinth Old Abe sat on his perch as calm as though nothing were going on, an incident which is said to have caused the Confederate general to declare that he "would rather capture that cussed bird than a whole brigade of Yankees."

Altogether Old Abe participated in 88 battles and engagements. After the close of the war Barnum offered $20,000 for the eagle, and a western millionaire "went" the prince of showmen "one better," offering to exchage $25,000 in gold for him. During the last years of his life Old Abe was kept in a large cage in the historical department of the capitol building at Madison. He died on March 26, 1881. His body was turned over to a taxidermist, who fixed the bird up until he now looks as natural as he did in life. Over a million pictures of Old Abe have been sold, and a book telling of his wonderful career had a good sale for several years.—St. Louis Republic.

An Exempt.

A Maine clergyman was talking to his Sunday school scholars the other day, and he expressed the hope that they would never come down stairs without first saying their prayers. A bright little boy promptly responded, "I shan't have to say my prayers, 'cause I don't sleep up stairs."—Exchange.

TWO SNAKE STORIES.

TOLD BY A GENTLEMAN WHO IS AWAY UP IN SERPENTOLOGY.

Snakes That Should Not Be Killed—How the Black Snake Hunts and Captures Its Food—Rescuing a Ship From a Python Who Had Calmly Taken Possession.

"Sit down and sharpen your pencil, while I overhaul my mental shelves," remarked Mr. Thompson, curator of the zoological collection in the park, in answer to a request for some snake stories. "Before giving you some of my experiences I want to enter a protest against the indiscriminate slaughter of our common harmless snakes, such as the black snake, garter snake and the like. Every farmer should protect them, for they are beneficial, instead of being harmful, as is generally supposed by a large majority of humanity. Any naturalist will tell you that the food of the black snake consists largely of rats, mice, etc., while that of the garter snake is principally insects, such as grasshoppers, caterpillars, etc.

"Now for some of my experiences. In my younger days I was crossing Ashby's gap, over the Blue Ridge, Virginia, in company with an uncle of the famous Black Horse Cavalry Ashby. We were making a portion of the ascent through quite a deep cut, when our attention was attracted by a toad, which rolled instead of hopped down the side slope. Ashby pulled up the horse and said, 'There's a black snake after that fellow.' An instant after the snake thrust his head through the fence, and on observing us drew back. In the meanwhile the toad had gathered himself together, and was hopping at a lively gait up the road. Ashby remarked, 'Now I will show you something,' and sprang out of the buggy and caught the toad, which he carried a short distance and released. Returning, he turned the buggy and drove back down the road some 50 steps, when we alighted and tied the horse. Climbing over the fence on the opposite side of the road to that on which the snake had made his appearance we stealthily worked our way up until we came in sight of the point where he was first seen. Lying down in the long grass and peering through the rails, we did not have to wait long before the snake reappeared.

"He looked about for a few seconds, and then descended the slope down which the toad had rolled, and followed his trail up the road. On coming to the spot where it had been picked up, he began to circle, precisely as a dog would act on losing the scent. He gradually increased the size of his circles until he struck the spot where the toad had been put down, when he made a bee line after it. We leaped into the road and hurried after his snakeship, who as soon as he discovered that he was being followed turned up the slope and squirmed out of sight through the fence. Ashby said, 'I am sure you are satisfied now that a black snake hunts by scent.'

"Now I shall have to take you out to South Africa. I lived in Durban, Natal, which is about 1,000 miles around the Cape of Good Hope, up toward Madagascar. One morning I received a note from the port captain, asking me to come down to the harbor with all possible dispatch, as a python had taken possession of a German brig and I was wanted to capture it. Taking one of my keepers with me, I hurried down, and found quite a crowd on the jetty, among which was the crew of the brig. On inquiry I learned that there had been a shower during the night, and in the morning the mate had ordered one of the men to go aloft and shake out the sails, in order to dry them. He started up, and on reaching the maintop turned and came down on the clean run. The tar was instantly ordered to hades and numerous other places, while the valiant mate started aloft to attend to matters on his own hook. No sooner did his head get on a level with the top than he came down at a gait which far excelled that of the disobedient sailor. He instantly raised the alarm, and the entire crew lost no time in getting on shore and spreading the report that the rigging was full of the biggest kind of snakes.

"With the assistance of the port captain's binoculars I had no difficulty in making a critical examination of the entire upper works of the vessel, which was anchored about 100 yards from the shore. The result was one large python, coiled around the laps of the main and topmast. Borrowing a sack, I managed, after much persuasion, to get two of the crew to pull myself and keeper off to the brig, where they left us and turned back to the jetty. I unrove the flag halyards, made a noose in one end of them and hunted around until I found a stout piece of reed some six or eight feet in length. Climbing up the shrouds, I make my attack through the lubber's hole by punching his snakeship with the reed, to the end of which I had tied the noose. He put his head down through the hole for the purpose of fighting me, when he was instantly noosed around the neck and the halyards made fast to the ratlines. In his violent efforts to effect a release he drew back with such force as rapidly to choke himself into insensibility. Calling to the keeper to hold the mouth of the sack open, I watched until I thought he was nearly at his last gasp, when I squirmed up on the top, loosened his coils around the masts, lowered him into the sack, when the keeper immediately cut the noose. By the time that I reached the deck he had nearly recovered from his severe wind stoppage. I gently opened the mouth of the sack to have a good look at him and discovered from his bloated appearance that he had recently partaken of a hearty meal. On the arrival of the crew on board it was discovered that the captain's fox terrier was missing. I therefore concluded that the python, in swimming across the harbor, had struck the vessel's hawser, up which he had crawled on to the deck, swallowed the dog and gone aloft to digest his meal."—Buffalo Commercial.

The Dangers of New York.

We are thankful every day that we live in the country. We have long wanted to visit New York, but we are afraid to. A man from Iowa, a harness maker of good reputation, went to New York lately to see the sights. In buying a piece of plug chewing tobacco he carelessly showed a $5 bill. A strange woman who saw the money immediately fell on his neck and said:

"Oh, William, William! Why did you desert me?"

The harness maker from Iowa had never seen the woman before, but she had him arrested, saying she was married to him in 1869. He was finally compelled to give her the $5 bill to get rid of her.—Atchison Globe.

Love Never Dies.

A MAN WHO WAS DREADED.

Baron Hirsch's Reputation as Death's Ally Among the Superstitious.

Perhaps no man of his time had so uncanny a reputation among his enemies as the late Baron de Hirsch. The evil eye was the least of the mysterious agencies for evil ascribed to him. Many persons—not all of the ignorant classes—believed that by a movement of the fingers he could bring down ruin upon whomsoever he wished to harm, and his breath was said to be poisonous, resulting in lunacy or slow death to those he breathed upon. Nor were there wanting proofs to those whose object it was to find them in the strange disasters that overtook many with whom he came in contact. Count Weinpfen, the Austrian embassador to France, who was allied with him in many enterprises, killed himself in Paris at a time when he apparently had everything to live for.

Baron von Blaschke, one of the finest officers in the Austrian cavalry, became associated in friendship and business with Baron de Hirsch and killed himself shortly after. Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria was De Hirsch's friend. His mysterious death at Meyerling and the scandal that followed shocked all Europe. Nor did those admitted to still closer intimacy with this strange person escape.

His right hand man and general factotum, Henry Coward, was found with his throat cut, every evidence being present to show that it was a case of carefully prepared self destruction. Count Pompey Coronnini, whom De Hirsch admitted to an intimacy accorded to few, became notorious in a poisoning case and was ruined in reputation.

Finally the baron's only son, Lucien, died suddenly and unaccountably, taking from De Hirsch's life one of the few real spots of brightness in it, for the affection between son and father was very strong. It is said that the baron knew of this unfortunate reputation of his, and that, once driving in the country with an acquaintance, he passed two peasants who made the sign of the cross, averting their faces.

"There is an instance of what the persecution of slander can do," said De Hirsch bitterly to his companion. "I would rather they had stoned me."

To the sinister reports of superstition, the effect of which was marvelously widespread, was due the blackballing of Baron de Hirsch at the Jockey club in Vienna, and it is said that it underlay the refusal of Count Festeticz to allow the Prince of Wales to bring the baron in his train on his proposed visit to Kesthely, the count's castle in Hungary. As a consequence, the prince at the last moment declined to go. To what extent he was manipulated in the correspondence on this delicate matter by De Hirsch, who was then in a position to exercise great influence upon the prince because of their financial relations, was a moot question and the topic of the hour in European society. There was hardly anything in the famous philanthropist's appearance to support the theory that he was an active agent for evil unless it were his eyes. These were very large and bright, of a grayish green hue and most peculiarly set under a rather retreating forehead. No other feature of his face was in any way remarkable.—Boston Advertiser.

ARBITRATION TREATY.

Senate Committee Will Report Favorably, with Amendments—Designation of the King of Sweden and Norway as Umpire Stricken Out.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations spent two hours this morning in the consideration of the general treaty of arbitration with Great Britain and then ordered a favorable report to be made the Senate to-morrow, with amendments in line with those indicated in these dispatches heretofore.

Much of the public criticism against the action of the committee during the last session was due to the alleged fact that the committee had emasculated the convention and made it practically a mere shell.

The amendment to the first article, that no question relative to the foreign or domestic policy of either party should be included, which was previously given such prominence, has disappeared entirely. The same result is reached, however, in a very different manner.

The designation of King Oscar of Sweden and Norway as the umpire has been stricken out, as has been all reference to the justices of the Supreme Court of the United States as members of the tribunal established under the treaty. In place of this designation it is stipulated that "jurists of repute" shall be named by the President to act as such arbitrators. The chief amendment to the convention, however, is found in the clause which reserves to the United States the sanction of the whole treaty-making power in deciding what questions shall be submitted to arbitration. This provision will make it necessary for the President to submit to the Senate for its approval all questions intended to be submitted to the arbitral court. The committee have acted in the belief that it has only reserved to this Government the identical power reserved by Great Britain, which, under the treaty, decides through its Premier what questions shall be arbitrated.

Acting Chairman Davis will urge a speedy action in the Senate as possible. It is quite likely that much of the time during the next two weeks will be spent in executive session. Pending the arrival of the Tariff bill in the Senate the treaty will be discussed, together with the consideration of Presidential nominations, and it is the confident expectation of the committee that it will be able to have this convention out of the way by the first of April.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Wheat, Corn and Oats Higher—Provisions Lower.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Wheat was influenced to-day altogether by the threatening aspect of the Turkish-Grecian difficulty. Opening from ⅝ to ¾c over yesterday, the tone thereafter was generally a firm one, although several recessions took place. The close was firm at ¾c net gain for the day. May wheat opened from 74¼ to 74⅝c, sold between 74¾ and 78¾c, closing at 74½c—¾c higher than yesterday. Cash wueat was firm and ¾c higher.

Corn quickly responded to the war scare, opening higher and successfully retaining the accession. Business was active, "shorts" taking alarm at the precarious appearance of the situation abroad and covering freely. May corn opened at 24½c, advanced to and closed at 24¾c—¾c higher than yesterday. Cash corn was firm and ¼c per bushel higher.

Yesterday's decline in oats was recovered at the opening to-day, the same forces which were at work in wheat and corn applying to this market May oats closed ⅝@½c higher. Cash oats were firm at yesterday's prices, closing nominally higher with the futures.

Heavy selling by professionals and by commission houses gave provisions a set back to-day. Early the feeling was firm on an advance in live hog prices, but the large offerings later caused a decline.

RICHMOND, March 17.—The directors of the Old Mutual Assurance Society of Virginia made public this afternoon a defalcation of some $35 000, as the result of the examination of the books of the association by an expert bookkeeper. Mr. F. D. Stegar, the assistant secretary, in whose accounts the defalcation occurs, was sent for to explain the matter, but did not appear and is said to have left the city. All the securities of the corporation, which is one of the oldest and strongest in the State, are intact, the loss being on collections.

KNOCKS CORBETT OUT IN THE FOURTEENTH ROUND.

Heavy-Weight Championship of the World Settled—A Clean and Speedy Fight—Corbett's Version of His Defeat—The Fight by Rounds.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CARSON, NEV., March 17.—After two years of doubt and vexatious postponements, the heavy-weight championship of the world was decided beyond cavil when Robert Fitzsimmons sent James J. Corbett helpless to his knees with a left-hand blow under the heart after one minute and forty-five seconds in the fourteenth round of their battle in the arena here this afternoon. The great contest was won in the simplest manner, and the knockout was the result of one unwary move on the part of Corbett. After the first minute of the fourteenth round had been spent in a few harmless clinches and counters Fitzsimmons made a fake lead with his right for the jaw. It was a simple ruse but it caught the Californian napping. Instead of keeping his body inclined forward and throwing back his head just a trifle to allow the blow, which was of the very lightest kind, to slip by, Corbett contemptuously bent his head and chest backward and thus protruded his abdomen. Fitzsimmons' small eyes flashed, and like lightning he saw and availed himself of his advantage. Drawing back his left he brought it up with terrible force, the fore-arm rigid and at right angle to the upper arm. With the full power of his wonderful driving muscles brought into play, the Australian fairly ripped the blow up the pit of Corbett's stomach at a point just under the heart. Corbett was lifted clean off his feet, and as he pitched forward Fitzsimmons shot his right up and around, catching Jim on the jaw and accelerating his downward fall. Corbett sank on his left knee and with his outstretched right hand grasped the ropes for support. His left arm worked convulsively up and down, while his face was twitching with an expression of the greatest agony. Referee Siler threw up his hands on the call of ten and left the ring. There were some cries of "foul" when the referee declared Corbett out, but they were unheeded by anybody, as the battle was won fairly and squarely. The defeat nearly drove Corbett wild. When he was able to feel his feet after his seconds had helped him to his corner, he broke away from them and rushed at Fitzsimmons, who had not left the ring. A scene of dreadful confusion ensued. The ring was crowded with an excited mob, but Corbett burst through them and struck at Fitzsimmons. The Australian kept his arms by his sides and with a great deal of generosity made allowance for Corbett's half-demented condition. Bob merely ducked under the blow, and when Corbett clinched with him and struck him a feeble blow on the ear the champion only smiled. It was with great difficulty that Billy Brady and the seconds succeeded in quieting Corbett down and getting him back to the dressing room.

The fight was clean and speedy. It demonstrated two facts—that Corbett is the cleverest boxer of his weight in the world, and that Fitzsimmons is able to hit him. The California boy smothered the Cornishman with left jabs in the face and right and left body blows. Fitzsimmons' most effective attack was a semi-fake left swing, followed with a quick half arm hook. The first time he tried it, which was in the third round, Jim threw back his head from the fake, coming forward for a counter when he thought Fitzsimmons' glove was comfortably past his jaw. Quick as a flash Bob doubled back and barely missed Jim's jaw with the hook. Corbett's smile died away for an instant and he took no more chances on countering on that particular form of lead afterwards.

Corbett's version of his own Waterloo did not vary greatly from Fitzsimmons'. "I made a mistake in not keeping away" was the way he put it. "Fitzsimmons I knew to be a terrific puncher, but I never calculated on his being able to reach me. If the sixth round had lasted ten seconds longer I would have landed him to a certainty. His nose was clogged with blood and his legs were wobbling. The gong sounded just as I was about to plug him with my right and end the battle. He recuperated wonderfully and I stayed away from him until I thought he was about ripe for another drubbing at short range. My neglect in not standing off when he tapped me on the cheek in the fourteenth round lost me the championship. That heart punch simply choked me up. I could not breath or move for fifteen seconds, and it was several minutes before I realized that I had committed a breach of etiquette in trying to follow up my opponent after he put me out. I meant it when I said I would be his friend hereafter. He whipped me fair and square, but I don't think he is the best man yet, and we will have another go if money can bring him into the ring."

Third Round—Corbett starts right in with that hard left hook on body. Fitz gets savage and tries left and right at Corbett's head, but does very little damage. Corbett lands another left jab on body and follows with right on short ribs. Jim clinches. Corbett lands right hard over heart. Fitzsimmons mixed it up and puts heel of his glove in Corbett's face. In the clinch Jim keeps his right working like a piston rod on Fitz's ribs. They clinch and Fitz roughs it in breakaway. As gong sounds Fitz seems unable to continue but Corbett sticks his right glove in Fitzsimmons' face and they go to their corners.

Sixth Round—They clinch, and Fitzsimmons tries to wrestle Corbett down. Loud cries of "Oh, oh." Corbett lands light left jab on face. Fitz counters on jaw. Corbett upper cuts freely with right and has Fitz going. Fitz is literally covered with blood, but is fighting like a demon. Corbett is showing signs of fast work. Fitz is down on one knee and takes time limit. He is full of fight. Corbett is slaughtering him with upper cuts. Corbett's leads are wild, and he misses many well intended blows. Time called with Fitz looking very much the worse for wear and Corbett puffing.

Eleventh Round—Clinch. Corbett lands his right on ribs and is countered with a jab on the chin. Fitz is bearing strength. Corbett misses half round hook in the jaw. Fitz lands hard left straight on Corbett's face. They clinch and Fitz crosses with his right in the clinch. They mix it and Fitz has decidedly the better of the roughing. Fitz fights Corbett to his corner and has him weak as the gong sounds.

Twelfth Round—Corbett rushes it misses left and is countered on the face. Fitz is bent on rushing it and Corbett is keeping away. Fitzsimmons is worse off in the rush. More clinching. Corbett lands left on Fitz's sore nose and follows up with half round at the body. He forces Fitz to the ropes and smashes hard on short ribs. Fitzsimmons spits blood copiously. Corbett is now rushing and lands one two, right and left, on the Australian's face. Corbett lands left on Fitz's face again and follows with a right at the body. He tries a knock-out upper cut with right, but is a hair too short. Corbett's round.

Thirteenth Round—Fitz lands right short on Corbett's ribs and left on jaw. Jim finds Fitz with a good left. Fitz rushed Jim over to his corner but does little damage. Corbett jabs Fitz lightly on head and he is back again with same on body. Corbett is sparring beautifully and ducking out of some very dangerous positions.

Fourteenth Round—Jim missed the opening lead with his right, but on his next attempt put his left on the jaw. Fitzsimmons countering stiffly with a right on the side of the head. The Australian sent in a right and left on the jaw which jarred Jim and then piled in a left upper cut, and as Jim turned around to skip out of reach Fitzsimmons pasted him on the back of the head. Fitzsimmons seemed to have more power than ever behind his blows. Jim hooked his left on the jaw, but Fitzsimmons retaliated with a heavy right on the same spot and they clinched. They broke clean. Fitzsimmons made a fake lead with his right. Instead of keeping his body rigid and throwing his head back as was his usual custom in allowing blows of this kind to slip by his face, Corbett, under-estimating his opponent's cunning, contemptuously threw back his head and chest, thus throwing his stomach forward. The Australian's small eyes twinkled and with panther-like speed he drew back his left with the forearm rigid, and ripped it up into the pit of Jim's stomach, a little under the heart. Corbett was lifted about a foot off the ground, and as he pitched forward Fitzsimmons swung his right on the jaw, and Corbett came heavily down on his knees. He remained down for fifteen seconds and Fitzsimmons retired to his corner while Referee Siler slowly announced the fatal seconds. Reaching the last count he threw up both his hands and left the ring.

A scene of indescribable confusion followed. Cries of "foul" were repeated throughout the arena and the crowd clambered through the ropes and surrounded both men. Of course there was no foul, as Corbett was knocked out fairly, and no notice was taken of the clamor. When Jim rose to his feet with difficulty he seemed about to fall prone on his face again, but he steadied himself with a desperate effort, and Charles White and McVey came on either side of him and threw his dressing gown over his shoulders and supported him until he recovered himself somewhat. When he got his senses back, partially, he worked himself into a state of hysterical mania. He broke away from his seconds and rushed at Fitzsimmons, who was standing at the side of the ring opposite his own corner. When Fitzsimmons saw the half-demented pugilist coming at him, he dropped his hands by his side and stood upright. Corbett swung at him wildly, and Fitzsimmons, without raising his hands, ducked the blow, and Corbett clinched him, striking with his right hand back of the ear as he did so. The blow was not hard, as the unfortunate Californian was very weak. Fitzsimmons took no notice of it, and Billy Brady and others of Corbett's seconds dragged him away from Fitzsimmons.

He was pacified and taken to his dressing-room shortly afterwards. Fitzsimmons started a dance of victory when he saw his opponent down. He waved a little flag above his head and stepped lightly down the ladder and into the arms of his wife, who sat awaiting him in a box right behind his chair. Mrs. Fitzsimmons kissed her husband's face, taking no notice of the blood which was trickling freely from his nose and mouth. Martin Julian headed the procession to the dressing-room, followed by Fitzsimmons, with Mrs. Fitzsimmons at his side, the crowd cheering the victor heartily.

The battle, as predicted, was fought on purely scientific and almost new principles. Neither of the men took any advantage of the privileges allowed them under the London prize ring rules, and there was very little hitting in clinches. Corbett made no attempt to bring around his right in breaking away, probably because Fitzsimmons held up his elbows too high. Jim's only effort in the way of a parting shot was a full right upper-cut, which he brought around very clumsily and failed to land by at least a foot every time he tried. He did get in one good upper-cut in the fourth round, splitting Bob's upper-lip and starting the blood in a thick stream. Several times the men clinched and parted with both hands up. Frequently Bob worked Jim into a corner and reached for him right and left with blows that would win any championship battle if they had landed. Fitzsimmons himself admits that Corbett shuffled and side-stepped his way to safety in a manner which simply dazed him.

"I never saw such a clever man in my life," said Fitzsimmons this evening. "He got away from me time and again when I thought I had him dead to rights. I knew I could wear him out, so I kept coming right along until my opportunity arrived. He was weak in the last round and all his cleverness could not keep him out of that left punch under the heart. The only blow that really worried me was the one which split my lip. The others I never felt. He fought fair and hereafter he may have my respect if he continues to merit it."

Green defeated Smith in the thirteenth round.

NEUTRALITY LAWS.

Clearance Papers Will be Refused Unless Affidavit is Made that They Will Not be Violated in Letter or Spirit.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—A conference on the subject of enforcing the neutrality and navigation laws was held at the White House to-day between the President, Secretary Sherman, Secretary Gage, Secretary Long and Attorney General McKenna. It lasted nearly two hours during the time when the rush of visitors was greatest and many went away disappointed in the hope of seeing the President after waiting for some time. The question that formed the basis for the conference related to the steamer Dauntless, now under surveillance at Jacksonville, Fla. Her owner has made application to clear from Jacksonville with a cargo of munitions of war, and the conference to-day was held for the purpose of arriving at a decision as to the right of the United States to grant or reject the application.

The conference was in continuation of the discussion concerning the Dauntless and the general subject of enforcing the navigation and neutrality laws which occupied the Cabinet yesterday. After that meeting it was arranged that the four Cabinet officers named, whose Departments deal directly with the enforcement of the international comity, should meet the President to-day. It was decided by the President and his advisers that clearance should be refused in all such cases unless the master of the vessel makes affidavit that he will not violate the letter and spirit of the neutrality laws.

WILL NOT ACCEPT AUTONOMY.

Cretan Insurgents Will Resist Occupation of the Island by the Powers—The Situation Becoming More Serious Every Day.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

ROME, March 17.—A dispatch from Canea to the Secolo says that the Cretan insurgents have declared that they will reject autonomy and offer all possible resistance to the occupation of the island by the Powers. The dispatch also says that Col. Vassos, commanding the Greek army of occupation, is about to move his camp to the mountains of Sphakia, where he will fortify himself so that his position will be almost impregnable. He will not withdraw his troops from the island under any circumstances.

LONDON, March 17.—A dispatch from Athens says the Greeks in Crete assert that the Turks holding the fortifications at Retimo have made a sortie into the town and pillaged the houses of the inhabitants without the slightest opposition on the part of the detachments of marines from the warships of the Powers.

CANEA, March 17.—The admirals commanding the foreign warships in Cretan waters have issued a proclamation announcing the conditions under an autonomous administration will be granted to Crete. The situation here is becoming more serious as each day passes, owing to the presence of 10 000 refugees who are receiving rations from the Government and which will necessarily be stopped in a few days. The condition of affairs at Retima is similar, and at Candia the situation is worse. Six Turkish soldiers were killed and twenty-five were wounded in the six hours fighting which occurred yesterday outside of Candia.

SPOTS AND FUTURES.

The New York Sun's Review of the Cotton Market.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The Sun says: Spot cotton here was unchanged, with sales of 389 bales for export and 468 for spinning; 2 200 were delivered on contract.

The speculation in cotton to-day was extremely dull. More of the traders, especially the younger element, were gathered about the telegraphic bulletins from Carson City than there were around the ring. Liverpool and New Orleans were small traders here, but the speculation was in the main of a local professional character. At the opening prices declided slightly, in sympathy with a decline in Liverpool, both for futures and spots. After the first transactions, however, prices rallied and advanced slightly. The high water in the Mississipi river checks selling, and prices are easily advanced on small purchases. Liverpool sold here, but New Orleans bought. The receipts at the ports were light, the spot markets were firm, and the exports were liberal. The decline in Liverpool was attributed to unfavorable political advices from that Levant.

MONITOR PURITAN.

Court of Inquiry Ordered to Investigate the Cause of Her Disablement Off Cape Hatteras.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—A court of inquiry, consisting of Captains Watson and McCormick, and Chief Engineer J. A. B. Smith has been ordered to meet at the New York navy yard Friday, at 2 o'clock, to investigate the recent cruise of the Puritan and the causes which led to that vessel's disablement off Cape Hatteras. It is expected that the result may be the ordering of a court martial. The information which reaches the Department indicates that the vessel rode out the gale remarkably well, and that she should have reached port without assistance. At least one of the boilers, it is said, was burnt out at sea, due to low water. The slight derangement of the machinery, it is claimed, might have been remedied at sea by competent mechanics.

Washington Hesig has resigned his postmastrship of the city of Chicago. Three days ago he wrote and forwarded his resignation to President McKinley.

Old Directors Consult in Regard to the Action Brought by Southern Railway Co.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., March 17.—All the old directors of the North Carolina Railway Company met in this city yesterday for the purpose of consulting together in regard to the action brought by the Southern Railway Company against the North Carolina Railway Company and the individual directors of that company. These were the directors appointed under the Democratic administration. The present Governor, D. L. Russell (Republican), has removed them, although he has never made public the names of their successors.

The bill filed by the Southern Railway Company was read and discussed, and J. S. Manning and Judge A. Burwell were authorized to answer the same on the part of the directors. The matter will be heard before Judge Simonton at Greensboro on the 6th day of April.

THE EASTERN SITUATION

Has Depressing Effect on Shipping—Cargoes Only Obtainable at Losing Rates.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

GLASGOW, March 17.—Clyde shipping is being greatly affected by the situation in the East, the depression of Eastern trade having reached a most acute stage. One shipping firm employing thirty-five vessels trading in the East has ordered all of its ships back to Great Britain and will hereafter put them in the Western trade. The reason given by the firm for this action is that the political situation in the East has depressed freights so that cargoes are obtainable only at losing rates.

WARM WIRLETES.

The tariff bill will be reported to the House on Friday of this week. This was the conclusion reached by the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee at their meeting yesterday.

The reapearance of an export demand is noted as an encouraging feature in the New York dry goods market for brown cotton goods. The tone of the market for cotton goods is without alteration in any direction. The tone of the woollen goods market is generally firm.

Secretary Sherman has received a cablegram from Consul General Lee, dated late yesterday, saying: Oscar Cespedes, a native of Key West, is released from Cabanas, on condition he leaves the island." Oscar Cespedes is number forty on the state list of Americans in prison.

The Senate Commitee on Foreing Relations ordered a favorable report to be made on the nominations of John Hay to be ambassador to Great Britain, Horace Porter, to be ambassador to France, and Mr. White, present secretary at London, to be secretary of the Embassy at London.

George Mowray was arrested at New York yesterday on a charge of having aided and abetted a filibustering expedition to Cuba which left Baltimore on the steamship Woodall in June, 1896. He was arraigned before a United States commissioner in $2,500 bail for examination Friday morning.

The total collections of internal revenue for the month of February last were $10, 729,016, an increase of $43,684 over February, 1896. The collections from July 1st., 1896, to and including February last, were $98 909,085, against $98,881-870 for the corresponding period of 1895-69 an increase for the period ended February last of $27,515.

The Observatore Romano, of Rome, a Papal organ, publishes an article commenting upon the nomination of Hon. Joseph McKenna as Attorney General in the Cabinet of President McKinley, in which the paper makes the claim that McKenna is the first Catholic who has been nominated a Cabinet minister of the United States since the foundation of the American Republic.

A Mystery In Blindness.

"I'm color blind," said the man to the policeman, who had just told him to take the next green car.

"Then you ought to get a dog," retorted the policeman.

This may have been smart from an official point of view, but it reminds me of the fact that a very large proportion of men are more or less color blind, and that some are absolutely so. Whether the defect is a natural one or whether it is a quality of ignorance that might have been avoided by proper culture I have never seen satisfactorily explained. I myself cannot distinguish green from blue at night nor tell certain shades of red from brown or blue from purple at any hour of the day.

One of the most singular things is—at least to me—that the absence of the knowledge of color does not necessarily destroy or even weaken the judgment of harmony in colors. I have seen the experiment tried at the water color exhibition, where a man practically absolutely color blind and almost as totally ignorant of pictures was able to pick out with as much accuracy as any artist present the best pictures of the great and varied display. Inharmonious colors in dress are as sharply offensive to my eyes as if I actually knew the names of them and could distinguish them. I wish some expert would enlighten us upon this subtle subdivision of a sense.—New York World.
